Definitions (If any):

Assessment: An evaluation, which utilizes professional expertise and skills in the collection and analysis of data to understand and describe the nature of service needs of an individual, family, or group.

Statement of Procedure:

The Ongoing Family Functioning Assessment involves the family and the child in a joint effort to identify and analyze the family strengths and resources as well as the contributing factors and underlying conditions that contribute to the child's safety and risk of maltreatment, recognizing that the child and the family are the experts on themselves. Immediate family members are engaged in the assessment process identifying extended family members and other supports available. Engagement of custodial and non-custodial fathers is critical to child well-being and may lead to the identification of other extended family members. Engagement begins with the moment the family comes into contact with the agency and involves;

- a) Identifying strengths, protective capacities, and resilience in parents;
- b) Building relationships with parents through empathy and compassion;
- c) Promoting caregivers and young people involved in the system as the experts for matters concerning their families, and
- d) Supporting the use of community-based resources to achieve positive outcomes.

The format used for the family assessment will include the approved family functioning assessment tool in the Comprehensive Child Welfare Information System (CCWIS). In addition, to the family functioning assessment, children and/or families receive a Comprehensive Behavioral Health Assessment conducted by community providers.

The case manager conducts a home visit with the child within two business days to further the assessment process for children in out-of-home care as well as those under in-home supervision. The Family Functioning Assessment is the formalized assessment process which is built from the assessment completed during the investigation stage of the case. Furthermore, the case manager receives the present danger assessment and safety plan completed by investigations to be able to assess ongoing. These initial tools for assessment inform decision making, identify suitable resource families, and assist in the development of safety plans with parents and resource families as needed.

A. The purpose of the family functioning assessment is to document and describe the specific family functioning and dynamics across six domains that must be addressed and baseline measurement of parental protective capacities and child needs which will be used to evaluate progress to determine:

1. Whether the child is able to live safely in the current home or placement, safely return to the home or whether the child needs to remain in an out-of-home placement.
2. Whether the family can provide a permanent and stable home in which the child can remain free from abuse or neglect.
3. The changes, if any, the family must make to provide a safe home for the child.
4. The needs the family has that hinder them in providing a safe and stable home for the child.
5. The unique resources and strengths the family possesses that can be used to provide for the child's safety and the family's ability to provide a safe environment.
6. The family functioning assessment aids in the development of the family's service/case plan. In addition, the family will be engaged in the decision-making process in the development of this service/case plan. See CN 003.006, Case Supervision.
